LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

We desire to prosure the express of a local architectory. Portedice District in the state. Will on friends act, or procure the services of some efficient person in our behilt? Pelleving that the circulation of the Genos rat may be materially extended, we make this appeal to our tricial, in its beloal.

The Richmond Dispatch notices the elections in the North. The editor can't deny that the men who will have power in that section after the 4th of March will do justice to the South. They have always done it. But still the editor can't come back. There can be no Union of the North and South. He is resolved, come weal comwoe, to have what he calls independence. The reason, he thinks, that the North will not part with the South is, that the counce tion is vastly profitable. He doesn't seem to appreciate the fact that the North has been vastly profitable to the South. In stend of being an irrepressible conflict, no two rections of country were ever so well adapted to each other. The rebels might casily see that it is infinitely Letter to have the North a friend than an enemy. They had better not let the North be independent of them. We think very little of the declarations of the men whose personal in terests are wrapt up in this rebellion They are not the people of the South. They may repudiate Union; they may despise the old flag. They have reason to do so. They may die ln the last ditch, or rather they may desire others to do so in their behalf and try to persuade the victims of their policy that it is the interest of the Southern people to have a separate Government. But there are facts rather potent to be misunderstood. To compel these Southern people to fight for independence, for their homes and firesides, a conscription is required. They must be driven into the army at the point of the bayonet. Then than sands desert when an opportunity offers. lustead of dying in the last ditch, they surrender like sensible people. This plantom, independence, costs too much. To be starved to death, if not killed, is more than they bargained for.

To be sure, if they are to be rolched, bankrupted, and a servile race let loose to overrun the South, whilst white men are to he subjugated and enslaved, they may re solve to die in the last ditch; but if they can come back with all their rights under the Constitution, it is a very different question. They will adopt some of that cold, calculating policy for which the Rich mond Examiner condemns the wise states men of England. Difficulties are settled by that cold, calculating policy. This Union was made by it, and not by personal attachments. Our fathers took what they liked and what they did not like all together, and were ready to compromise and mutu ally forgive a great deal for the sake of

This generation will have to follow their example, if they have wisdom enough to do so. Adversity teaches wis lom, and the South is not too old to learn.

The men at Bichmond will be the last to appreciate the wisdom which meessity teaches. Still experience keeps a dear school, and it is said even fools learn in it It is impossible that they can eacrifice their pride, it is said, but it is not half as much so as it is to divide this Union. It can't be divided, and it would not remain so if it

The Confeds had just as well make up their minds new that their object can't be accomplished. Manifest destiny will not allow it.

Lord Lyone it is said told his Govern ment that the North and South would eventually form a Union, no matter what Imprened now that this epidemic of pas sion would run out, and that the mutual in terest of the parties would restore a Union again. Hence Emojean interterence was unwise. It was a family quirtel, and those who interfered would in the end have to encounter the Lostility of both united in the end. Let the Confeds begin to make terms now. There is the old tonstitution, We shall never get a letter. If it needs any explanation to insure its guarantics, a national convention cun make them. The powers at Richmond will never entertain mny propositions. They are like the Abolitionists-no compromise. But these an tagonisms will not be bllowed to ruin this

The Charleston Mercury, discussing the prospects of peace, suys "If we allow the Yankees to impose on us again, they will do us intuitely more injury after ! peace than they could in time of war." The South had the Union all her own way whilst it lasted, and, according to her own story she made it untit to live in. She couldn't do worse then than to make a Government of her own, and repeat the experiment the had as well be imposed on by Yankees as to impose on herself, as she has done, according to her own showing. The Mercury is rather peculiar; its allies didn't have the Union for what had been, but for what was going to be. The Merenry was badly oppressed by what had been on all occasions 155, Hon. Jumes Brooks, as our readers are aware, has been elected to Congress by the Democracy of New York, nided by the Old-Line Whigs. In a speech he made after the election, he compromised the matter by remarking that he was an (thi-line Whig, but that he had been supported by the Democrats. As you, said he have adopted the Whig doctrine, "the Constitution, the Union, and the enforcement of the laws," I don't see why we should not adopt your name.

General Sherman, of Memphis, It is said, has contributed one thousand dollars to the poor of that place. The Abolition organ at Washington says if he had given it to the paor negroes we should have heard a great fuss about it. If any Abolitionist has given a thousand dollars of his own money to the pour negro, let us hear of it. The world will make a furs over it as a strange and unaccountable event.

AUVANCED THE ARMY TO THE PRONT DE YORKTOWN - RETECENCE OF THE BEBLI. POPULATION - GREAT STRENGTH OF THE CONFEDERATE LINE OF DEFENSE DIGAN-TIC LABORS OF THE FEDERAL TROOPS -THE WITHDRAWAL OF HOUSER'S DIVISION ITS LAMENTABLE RESULTS IN THE CAM-PARIN-THE STERE AND EVACUATION OF

MIRKTOWN - dr., de., de. [From the New York Herald.] We continue to day the highly interest ing history of Prince de Jouville of the operations of Gen. McClellan on the peninsula. The present instalment carries the army from its arrival at Fortress Mon roe to the evacuation of Yorktown and the pursuit by the Union forces. ARBIVAL OF M'CLELLAN AT FORTRESS MON-

RHE, AND ADVANCE TO YORKTOWN. While they were thus waiting for the Merrimac, and waiting in vain, the army arrived at Fortress Monroe, where extra-ordinary activity prevailed. On the 4th of April six divisions, the cavalry, the reserve and an Immense number of wagons, were already lunded. The Commanding theneral, who arrived in the afternoon, have carried this latter position, and thus placed them all in motion. Keyes, with three divisions, took a toute extending along the marglu of the James river. Mc-Clellan, with the rest of the troops, took the direct road to Yorktown. They first passed through the rains of the town of fense of the lines of Yorktown that it would llampton, hurned same months before by a bave been in a must perilous position. The proceeding a la Rostopchin, by the rebel theneral Magruder, it was he who still commanded the troops set apart for the de-fense of Yorkhawa and the peninsula. have retreated in all haste to Bichmond. Magruder, like at the Confederate generals, had, up to the outbreak of the insurction, belonged to the regular army of the head of the Federal troops, were familiar atl at Washington, and it was expected that with his habits and his character, and they would have arrived in a body, in transsought to deduce from this the conduct ports, at Yorktown, at the moment when which he would pursue towards them the rest of the army, coming from Fortress This reciprocal acquaintance of the com-manders of the two armles with one another-which resulted from a common life begun in youth on the school bench, and continued, it may be, on the field of battle or during the long garrison of the frontiers -was certainly one of the most singular traits of this singular war. Some persons even founded hopes of reconciliation on this old companionship; but those hopes were not to be realized.

THE DIFFICULTY OF OSTAINING INFORMA

TION. Another trait, not less curious, which was manifest from the first day, and which did rious, would not have had so had an effect not cease to recur, was the complete absence of information of the country and of made. Now, it was the mainspring removed the position of the enemy-the total Igno- from a great work already begin. It derance of their movements and of the nam- ranged everything. ber of their troops. The few inhabitants who were encountered were all hostile and dumb; the deserters and negroes generally said a great deal more than they knew to make themselves welcome; and in the abscuce of majes and of all knowledge of locali ties it was impossible to make any use of their statements, or to clear up their often very contradictory information. We were some twenty-four miles from Yorktown, and did not know what works had been thrown up by the enemy, nor what was the number of his forces inside of the place. The case was rendered more extraordinary from the fact that Fortress Monroe had always been occupied by a strong garrison, which ought to have been able to obtain some information by means of reconnoissances; but, by a strange aberration, that fortress, which had become the base of operations of the army of the Potomac, had, with the troops occupying It, been withdrawn from the command of General McClellan, although he seven miles long, should not be weak at was superior in rank to the officer who comwas superior in rank to the officer who com-manded there. Hence there arose military it the result would be what generally occurs susceptibilities very unfavorable to the ex- in similar cases. The enemy would believe a grand assault, but the steam transports between Mobile and Harper's Ferry. change of confidential communications.

THE ARMY MOVING IN THE DARK. Thus the army of the Potomac moved in the dark toward Yorktown. We took two days to reach the place. On the way the column of the Commanding General had met with some fortified positions; but the enemy had abandoned them. At rare intervals a few horsemen were seen making oliservations in the distance. As soon as we came up to the walls of Yorktown we were immediately arrested by its guns. Some gunboats which had approached of the York river found it de fended by about forty cannon of heavy caliber. The naval officers came to the conclu sion that they had not the means of forcing a passage, and therefore could not invest the place by water.

THE LINE OF WARWICK CREEK. When we attempted to invest it by land we found ourselves in presence of a series of works extending across the peninsula along the edge of a marshy stream, called Warwick creek, and of a sufficient elevation to reader investment impossible. rebels had erected dykes In different parts of this stream, converting it Into a kind of poud. These dams and all other accessible points were defeuded by redonbts, artillery and ritle pits. Abuttis had been placed in front of these redoubts on the opposite side of the marshy stream, with the view of giv-ing the gans an extended range. General Keyes, in marching along the James river soon came upon Warwick creek, and in seeking for a ford was the first to discover that line of defense. His march had been very slow. The country, altogether flut, and covered with marshy forests, was only traversed by a few roads searcely worthy of the name. They reminded me of the exploring roads of the wood of La Brie, or that part of the forest of Compaigne known as Bouquet Grass. The rain, which fell in torrents rately known, even in this season, and which threatened to follow the army to the very walls of Richmond, had succeeded in rendering these roads—as there is no other name for them-entirely impracticable. The infantry could still continue to advance by marchlug in the water through the woods; but as soon as two or three cannons or wagons had cut up the ground it was impossible to move any other wheeled vehicle. We were therefore forced to stop; for it was impossible to leave the artillery and wagons behind-more especially the latter. The country was a complete desert, and it was necessary to transport all our provisions. With the exception of wood and water, we found nothing. The soldiers, little accustomed either to marching or to bear their equipments, carried but two days' provisions. After these two days the army entirely depended on the wagons for their subsistence. It was therefore necessary to construct what the Americans call corduroy roads. CONSTRUCTION OF CORDUROY ROADS. This work consists in cutting down trees of equal size, of two or three decimetres in diameter, and placing them side by side on the ground. All the infantry that were not on picket duty on the outposts were employed, up to their knees in mud and water, in this herenlean labor, accomplishing mar-velous results. The American pioneer was here in his element, and the roads were made as if by enchantment. The eannous and wagons arrived slowly; but they arbelieved entirely impossible to have brought them.

At night the soldier had not a spot of dry ground to bivouac upon. He was obliged to sit on the trunks of overturned couch on which he took but precarious rest I remember having seen a General of divisof five or six poles covered with pine branches-one end of the poles stuck in

THE ARMY BROUGHT TO A STAND. From all this it resulted that the army was brought to a stand, from the secure day of the compaign, by forces considerable in appearance, and before a position that could not be carried without great difficulty. But this had been foreseen order to gain time and to avoid the delays of a siege, General McClellan had thought of a plan of turning the position. The enemy held the James river with the Merrima and their guntants; he closed the York river with the latteries of Yorktown and tiloncester-a small place on the opposite bank. Nevertheless, by effecting a landing on the Severn, beyond Gloncester, we might facilitate the entrance of the Frderal gaubouts into the Yark river, Advancing then up the left bank, in the direction of West Paint, we would get so far to the rear of the army charged with the deger; but as soon as Gloucester lead fullen into the hands of the Federals, he would cantided to one of the corps d'armee of the Potomic, commanded by Gen. Instead of it, we received the inexplicable and unexplained intelligence that this corps, 35,000 strong, had been sent to another destination. The news was received by the army with satisfaction, although the majority could not then foresee the deplorable consequences of an act performed, it must be supposed, with no intention, but with inconceivable reckless ness. Fifteen days earlier this measure although it would always have been inju for new arrangements might have been

THE WEAK PARTS OF THE ENEMY'S LINE. The reflection then arose that it was impossible that this line of intrenchments, tiqued to push on rapidly through the troops at the upper part of the stream, on breach thus made with overwhelming orces we might probably bare inflicted o this army so cut in twain one of these disasters which decide the fatoof a campaign It was supposed that we would find a weak spot towards the center of the lines of Warvick creek, at a place called Lee's Milis Here it was possible to cross with the water up to the waist, the bottom of the creek eing firm. There was a kind of open plateau in front of the enemy's works where, during the assault, a strong artillery force could be brought up to play upon them

THE ATTACK ON MILL CREEK.

On the 16th of April an attempt was made upon this place. Eighteen field pieces upened fire at a distance of five ha metres (about two hundred and sixty yards from the Contederate butteries, completely silencing them, and the creek was the crossed by some companies of Vermont regiments. They advanced with great covery and carried a ritle-pit, but the ammunition in their cartonches had been wetted in passing the creek, they were no apported, and coascquently were compelled to retire, after having lost a great part of heir force. The project thus begun was doubtless found to present unforeseen

All this wandering in the dark ing more and more embittered; interest, had, infortunately, consumed much time, and the siege itself would cousaine much more, although it should be pushed with the greatest energy. Ten thousand labor ers were uncessingly employed cutting through the woods and forming roads trenches and batteries. It was a spectacle. From this natural parallel others were formed by the hand of man, and we rapidly approached the place. The de enders opened a terrific tire on those works that they could see, as well as upon those which they supposed were in progress Shells whistled on every side through the large trees, cutting down branches, fright ening horses, but otherwise doing very tit tle harm. Nobody cared about it. In the evening, when all the laborers returned in good order, with their ritles on their backs and their shovels on their shoulders, the fire became more furious, as if the enemy had marked the hour of their return. went to this cannonade as to a show; and when, on a beautiful night in spring time, the troops gayly marched along to this mar tial music through the flowering woods; when the balloon, with which we made our reconnoissances, was floating in the air, we seemed to be spretutors at a fele, and for a moment were made to forget the miserus of PROGRESS OF THE SIEGE.

The siege, however, still went on. Pow erful artillery, with great difficulty, had been brought up. One hundred and even two hundred pounder rifed cannon and thirteen-inch martars were ready to batter the place. Fourteen hatteries were con-structed, armed, and appointed. THE OLD SIEGE OF YORKTOWN. These artillery experiments, so new and celebrated capitulation which secured the independence of the United States. At Here, in that old ruin, Lafayette had established his headquarters; here the regetation of that country had reasserted manders. It was behind these same fortiperity and their greatness. Apart from the motion with which these far-distant memo ries of national glory were thus discoveredapart from the interest with which I found traces of military scenes, some of the actors ln which I have known, I asked myself whether, by a strange caprice of fate, these ame ramparts should see the destruction lelays of the siege of Yorktown would not roads, and especially that taken can alliance, that alliance hitherto so favorable to all generous lileas, was more detown was a civil war, and while we were fighting in the Federal ranks for the most ust of causes, nothing could oblige France to send her soldiers here; but the weight pleased to see their former allies making THE CAPTURE OF YORKTOWN CERTAIN.

It was evident that with the powerfu means at our disposal the capture of York-town was but a work of time. Shattered ubout to be opened upon it, without case-mates to cover their soldiers, without any other defense than outworks and palisades the place had not even the chance of opposing o lengthenedresistance. Everything was ready for the final blow. Not only was a terrific bombardment shout to be opened upon the city, not only were the most select troops set apart to follow up this hombardment by the line of retreat of the t'onfe lerate army. A part of these troops were also to remain on board the transports. They would have aken but a few hours to traverse by water the distance it would have taken the enarmy two days at least to murch by land. Driven from the lines of Yorktown by a powerful attack, pursued sword in hand, intercepted on the route by fresh troops, that army would have been in a m critical position, and the Federals would have obtained what they so much desired an astonishing military success. DESIRES FOR TERMINATING THE WAR.

There were not only desires to terminate the strife in consequence of the serious risks with which the campaign threatened to be prolonged; political interests were perhaps even more pressing than military interests. A victory, a decisive victory, could alone insure the re establishment of the Union, that wish so ardently desired by all patriotic Americans, which placed be youd the passions of parties and sects the greatuess and prosperity of their country. Bull Run, by humilisting one of the two adversaries, had for a time closed the door in all chance of an arrangement. As soon as the lawful government of the country could enforce retaliation by force of arms it would become possible to open negotiations and to re-establish, by con the fraternal bond of the Union. For this reason it was necessary to hasten its movements; the feelings of both sides were bepersonal ambition and foreign intrigue were being actively interpo ed between the two camps, and every day rendered the work of reconciliation mure difficult. great success of the Federal army before Yorktown was therefore of vltal importance to the government at Washington. tunately, the Confederate leaders and Gencrals were of the same opinion, and, as able and resolute men, they took the best means to render it impossible.

EVACUATION OF YORKTOWN. Retween the nights of the 3d and 4th of May, Yorktown and the lines of the Warwick river were evacuated. This evacuation unst have commenced several days before; but it had been conducted with great skill and energy. On the Sd, the fire of the nemy s battories was redunbled in severity Shells thrown from ritted cannon tlen around on all sides with a range which no one supposed they could attain. cision of their fire compelled the abandonment of all the signal posts which had been established on the tops of high trees. The balloon itself, as soon as it appeared by the air to make its customary observations, was saluted with a shower of projectiles which, however, did no harm. toue with the design of masking their re treat, and it succeeded perfectly.

HOW IT WAS DISCOVERED. Early on the morning of the 4th the sol liers in the ritle pits on the advanced posts did not see anything before them, where upon some of them cantionaly advanced to the enemy's lines. The silence of death prevniled. Very soon what had been at first a suspicion became reliable informatinn and was carried to the General headquarters by all the telegraphic lines unit ing it with the different corps d'armee. The Confederates had disappeared, and all chance a brilliant success had manshed. The impos sibility of the co-operation of the unvy. and the fatal measures which withdrew the orps of Mcliowell from the Army of the l'otomac, united with the courage of the enemy to prevent the capture of Yorktown We had afterwards lost s month in gigantie works, now become use less, and after all the Confederates had retreated, satisfied with having galned time wanting to complete all our preparations. to prepare the defenses of Richmond, and counting thenceforth on the hot season and try the two hundred pounders. Here was matter for serious and even mouinful reflection; but moments are precious in war, and it is weakness to waste them in repining. It was probable that the army of the enemy was not far distant; they could not have made a very great advance, and, in throwing ourselves them into confusion, and make them pris-

THE PURSUIT BY THE PEDERAL ARMY. A few hours after the news of the evacuation the whole Federal army was in motion. Stoneman's cavalry were the first to enter the intrenchments. As they passed through them several infernal machines, urious in themselves, were not the only cowardly instruments of destruction, ex-nteresting features of the siege. We had time enough only to armies of France and America, under cast a glance at the formidable works Washington and Rochambeau, and these thrown up by the enemy, and on which he military operations were concluded by the left seventy-two pieces of artillery. Then celebrated capitulation which seemed the passing rapidly through the abandoned independence of the United States. At camps, the magazines on fire, in the midst every step we met with traces of the first of which we yet heard explosions, we took the road to Williamsport, a small town sitnated at a point where the Virginia penin-French trenches were commenced; there sula, enclosed between two creeks or arms neumped the regiment of Bourbon and of the sea, offered a very strong defensive that of Saintonge. > Interesting Reports from the South. THE REBEL ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, ETC.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14, 1862. A gentleman arrived here to day who has spent several weeks in rebeldom, and had familiar access to the rebel Army of the Potomac, and all the principal points between Mobile and Harper's Ferry. There his position turned at both extremities, and only awaited a sign to push immediately is much in the information he possesses would become demoralized, and If we can up the York river and to land Franklin's which it is improper at this time to publish. llis observation shows that the rebels have oncentrated in their Army of the Potomac early the whole of their available military force in the Atlantic States, leaving only a mall number to garrison other points. When they left Richmond, upon their march into Maryland, their aimy numbered SUIDOR, but it is now reduced to about 130,000, and since the battle of Antietam has been terribly demoralized, disheartened ind destitute. The retreat from Antictam was made in great disorder, and it was believed that if the Union army had followed the day after the battle, at least 50,000 stragglers would have been captured on the Maryland side of the l'otomac. l'reparaions for continuing the retreat up the Shenandoah were made immediately, and as rapidly as the disordered forces could be brought logether. Arrangements were made to full back towards Stannton. As usual in such cases, the rebels made show fa large force by exhibiting portions of their year guard at several different points, thus magnifying a small number into a great army. This informant represents that the conscription has been a failure, and that not more than fitteen thousand conscripts had been brought into Richmond and those are being drilled principally without arms .- Special to N. JOHN BRIGHT ON THE WAR IN AMERICA .-Mr. John Bright, in a recent letter to Mr. Jewett on the civil war in this country,

"If you are for the Union, and think it can be preserved by conciliating the South, I confess I am amazed. They have made war npon you, because they suspected that you would yield nothing more to them; are you to yield more under compulsion of the var, or because you can neither conquer the South nor yet sals s' as an independent State without her? If you love alivery and wish to continue it, and if you think you can build up with honor a restored and united Republic by humbling yourself to the South, I can only express my surprise at the dream which possesses you. You may separate, or you may fight out this contest and win, but to leave the slave still a slave will expose you to the contempt of the civilized world. I appland the proclamation of the President, as does every man in Europe who is not a fee to freedom, or noved by have hostility to the American Republic because it is a Republic, and because It is powerful."

The rebel papers had an enormous story of the supplies Bragg had taken out of Kentucky, and were congratulating themselves on a feast of fut things. GAMBLING IN NEW YORK .- The gambling laws of New York have done little to suppress this infumous vice. The New York correspondent of the Boston Journal

Gambling is the great hane of society in

New York-the ruin of our finest young men-the cause of failures-of commercial bankrupicy-the wife, sorrow and shame of Many a man goes by the board, who on 'Change and in the press have been ruined by a "bad speculation" or "bad debts," whose ruin was caused only by gambling. Many a man is out late, looks haggard, wan and dispirited, who gives trade or business as a reaso i, whose real trouble is gambling. The amount of it and the magnitude of it is alarming, and the example of men who should stand at the portals of the path and warn with a trumpet voice the young from this way of death-go in the open light of day and call he young to fol-low. We have men among us, gray-headed, rich and influential, whose games of hazard are fabulous-whose sons are treading the same terrible path, without the cool heads and great strength of character that has kept their fathers from utter ruin. Two merchants of New York met for a game of chance, in other words, to gamble. Both are men well known. Roth of them have been very rich, and one is so still. But reverses, and perhaps gambling, has brought one down to the sum of $150,000. The game run on. The $150,000 man held a high hand. He proposed a game of bluff. It was accepted if the stakes should be the full sum of $150,000. Confident of winning, it was accepted. The game was against him, and he went out ggar. He came in the next day, and paid up "like a map." His "generous" an-tagonist in consideration of his "honorable conduct" in paying this "lebt of konor," made him a present of $50,000 to begin the world anew. The fortunate winner can be seen any pleasant afternoon with his spanking team on Central Park.

TERESA CARRENO, THE YOUTHFUL PIANIST. Teresa Carreno is a little bit of a dark-eyed, beautiful, darling South American child, only right years old, half a dozen hands high, fond of doll-babies, and miscellaneous romping, but with a musical genius which is at once a point of wonder and admiration. She is a pianist, with little fingers but large brains, too short, when fingers but large brains, too shere, seated, to reach the pedals with her feet, but tall enough intellectually to reach the sentiment and soul of music. Infant prodigies are rure-heaven be praised al-though every infant is a prodicy to its mother; and even the few which are acknowledged simply evince an aptitude for imitation, which is a faculty rather than a talent, and promises but very little for the future. But the darkeyed little darling, Teresa Carreno, from Carracas, is no instructed parrot, but a thinking, feeling artiste, who, while she clicits as onishment by her executive power, raises astonishment to a higher pitch by the maturity of her style, by a pervaling judgment, by her appreciation of light and shade, proportion, and the nicer grades of relative musical values; and, lastly, by a sentiment and expression which have come to her heaven only knows how. She is so mere a child, sa urcessarily ignorant of all that constitutes an artisted that we listen and wonder, and even while we gaze upor the heantiful childish face, we doubt the evidence of our senses. She is a genius of the purest slamp, and a pearl of price to be treasured and fostered to a development of the god-like powers with which nature has a cod-like powers with which nature has a cod-like powers with which nature has a cod-like powers with which nature has so richly endowed her. This is Teresa Carreno, the child pianist. - Leslie's Illustrated

HUMORS OF THE NEW YORK ELECTION .-The proyech, "train up a child and away he will go," was amusingly illustrated at the recent election in New York. In the height of the polling at one of the uptown booths, not a hundred miles from Fifth avenue and Madison square, a Republican po licemen keeping watch over the faithful, was accessed by a small and spirited young gentleman, of some five summers, who, dragging after him a reluciant maid, demanded in a decided tone the privilege of a freeman. He had a roll of ballots in his hand, and presented them to the astonished Mr. B., exclaiming, "this is my vote; I am Pierre B.—, of No.— Fifth avenue, and I vote for Seymour!" The M. P. could not resist this Democratic cherub, and meckly took his hallots. Master Pierre, however, was not dispused to let the enemy off so "Sup," he cried, tugging at his maid's skirts, and producing another roll of votes, "This is Biddie's vote. She votes for Seymour, too!"
